DEMOCRATIC TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION THIS EVENING

The route of the great Democratic torchlight procession which will take place this evening has been changed. Owing to the rain of the past few days it has been decided to confine the parade to the paved streets. The route will be as follows:

Starting from Court square, down Patton avenue to West Haywood and Buxton streets to the cotton factory, then returning, up Spring street to West Haywood, thence to Haywood, thence up Haywood street to the postoffice, thence up Patton avenue to Court square, thence down College street to Oak, from Oak to Woodfin, thence to Charlotte street, thence to Chestnut street, thence to Merrimon avenue, thence to North Main street, thence return to the square.

Several short speeches will be made at the cotton factory and at Court square on the return of the procession. The speakers will be Hon. J. S. Carr and many prominent local speakers.

County Chairman Murphy has made elaborate preparations for the parade. There will be a large supply of torches of the usual variety, in addition to which some of the torches will have colored lights, which will lend variety to the scene, and will produce a striking effect. The paraders will also be supplied with fireworks, so that the parade will be a brilliant spectacle even at a distance.

Stirring music will be furnished by two bands, the North Carolina State band and the Weaverville band.

All white men are invited to take part and no one should miss seeing what will probably be the finest thing of the kind that has ever taken place in Asheville.
